The Scramble for Wealth.

If there is a sad thing in the world. it is the spectacle of the men and women who, in their mad scramble for wealth, have crushed out of their Hves sentiment and the love of all that is beautiful and sublime. The very process by which they seek to win the means of enjoyment kills the faculties by which they can enjoy. When the average man wins his wealth he finds himself without the power of enjoyment, for the enjoying side of his nature is dead. He finds to his sorrow that the straining, striving life is also a starving one.

The hand can never execute anything higher than the character can aspire.-Emerson.

HON. GEORGE W. HONEY. Hon. George W. Honey, National Chaplain U. V. U., ex-Chaplain Fourth

Wisconsin Cavalry, ex-Treasurer State of Wisconsin, and ex-Quartermaster General State of Texas G. A. R., writes from 1700 First St., N. E., Washington, D. C. as follows: D. C., as follows:

"I cannot too highly recommend your preparation for the relief of catarrhal troubles in their various forms. Some members of my own family have used it with most gratifying results. When other remedies failed, Peruna proved most efficacious and I cheerfully certify to its curative excellence."

Mr. Fred L. Hebard, for nine years a leading photographer of Kansas City, Mo., located at the northeast corner of 12th and Grand Aves., cheerfully gives the following testimony: "It is a proven fact that Peruna will cure catarrh and la grippe, and as a tonic it has no equal. Druggists have tried to make me take something else 'just as good,' but Peruna is good enough for me.

Pe-ru-na in Tablet Form.

For two years Dr. Hartman and his assistants have incessantly labored to create l'eruna in tablet form, and their strenuous labors have just been crowned success. People who object to liquid medicines can now secure Peruna tablets, which represent the solid medicinal ingredients of Peruna.

AN OUTING IN WHUNGARY MUSEUM IN TOWN PARK BUOAPEST

> "On leaving Trenscen we traveled down the Danube, when an hour's journey brought us to Orsova, a quaint oriental town on the Roumanian border just above the Iron Gates. A gentle specimen of the unspeakable Turk rowed us across to the island of Ada-Kaleh, midway in the Danube, where the people of a Turkish colony live under Hungarian protection, exempt frem taxes and military service, making life picturesque for themselves and for the strangers who visit them to sip Turkish coffee and buy Turkish wares at their funny little shops.

We sampled the baths, whose strong gypsy band, that played in the morn-gypsy music.

"The finest stretch of the Danube lies just above Orsova, and the day's voyage from there to Belgrade was well worth the early start on a chill October morning. The glorious scenery of the defile of Kazan, the coming and going of peasant folk of many nationalities-Servians, Hungarians, Roumanians, and people from farther east, with an occasional grand Turk spreading his praying-carpet on the deck at sunset, make a steamer-voyage on that part of the Danube memorable.

"There is, indeed, no pleasanter mode of travel in Hungary than by the steamers that ply on the Danube and the Tisza, and it has the advantage of economy, since fares are low and you can sleep as well as have meals on board.

"Our steamer anchored just above the flashing crown of electric lights fruitfulness, is a delightful time for a that marked Belgrade, and, after a tour in Hungary; and, moreover, the day spent in the capital of King traveler who times his visit then can Peter's kingdom, where there is a fascinating market, we took train for count on seeing something of the Hungarian vintage, a festival pecaliarly Szeged. Not that we had any special wish to see that prosperous but somewhat prosaic town, which has been the home of picturesque costume and rebuilt on the site of one washed away by the floods of the river Tisza. some 30 years ago. It was but a convenient stopping-place on the way to the most fascinating part of Hungary. Transylvania; and its shops and theater and picture-gallery, even its market-place, ablaze with costume and aflame with red pepper, did not tempt us to linger.

"For time was flying, and to leave Hungary without making a tour in Transylvania would be to miss the finest forest and mountain scenery. the most bewitching variety of costume, the most characteristic portion of the land of the Magyars. It is in Transylvania that many Magyar nobles have their country seats, and there the best shooting is to be had. the most delightful hospitality is dispensed. It is a vast country, and up in the mountains and off the beaten track the traveler may have occasionally to rough it. Another pleasant town is Nagy-Szeben (German, Hermannstadt), where you seem to stumble into the middle ages or a Faust legend, so old-world are its cobbled streets, its churches and houses, and market-place peopled with Saxons, Roumanians, and Hungarians in picturesque costumes. Both Negy-Szeben, and Brasso (German, Kronstadt), the woods on the spurs of the Little a few hours nearer the Roumanian border of Hungary, are good centers for excursions among the peaks of the Carpathians. The Carpathian club has mountain shelters where travelers can obtain simple fare and beds, and is ever ready to help the stranger with advice and information from its offices in these towns. "It was, however, too late in the season for more than a flying visit to some of the quaint little walled citadels of the Saxon settlers, whose fortified churches tell of the surprise visits of the Turks to dwellers in these regions. But before leaving Brasso, I traveled as far as the Roumanian border, and had glimpses of mountain scenery whose rugged grandeur reminded me of the Scottish Highlands."
